

NATIONAL PANCREATIC CANCER ROADMAP

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Consultations

Have your say about pancreatic cancer.

Pancreatic cancer takes the lives of around 30 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people every year.

It's time to change that.

YOU CAN HELP

Click here to take the survey

Click the button above to take the survey and share your knowledge.

Or, you can use the QR code top right, or copy this link into your browser https://cdu.az1.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_8BS4cVeZEq1d54

Very little is known about pancreatic cancer among Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.

Cancer Australia is developing a new national plan to tackle pancreatic cancer.

Menzies School of Health Research is working with Cancer Australia, to find out what should go into this plan to get better outcomes for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people diagnosed with pancreatic cancer.

If you or someone close to you has been diagnosed with pancreatic cancer, your story can help to build up a picture of what is working well and where more needs to be done.

If you are a health professional working with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people affected by pancreatic cancer, or you have a role in research, policy or programs; or as an advocate or champion – we need your help too.

Please complete the survey (see left) and pass it on to others.

Australian Government
Cancer Australia

Share your story, do the survey

Help our mob live longer, stronger

For more information about the survey, phone Menzies on (07) 3169 4240, and ask for Jenny or Brian. Or email jenny.brands@menzies.edu.au.

Visit Cancer Australia's National Pancreatic Cancer Roadmap.